HAZE

Paper flowers stacked up in table of coffee and tea and wisps of humdrum words that fly into fireworks of silence.

Two by two added
and I got five.

Because turning pages after pages just clog
four of us in a jail.

I wanted a sudden flash electrics of fire that will melt my freezing shake.

But you went away with your coat and furry jacket while I swam in your oceanic haze.
