A woman is viewed just a thing, a pretty face
Reduced to mere body, object of grace
Her worth determined by her curves
Her soul and mind, the world just verges.

Objectified and dehumanized
Her value seen only with her size
Her voice and thoughts, just pushed aside
As the world only wants her body to reside.

She's just a product, a commodity
Her worth dependent on her rarity
Her body for sale, for all to see
Her dignity lost, and roasted for free.

But she's so much more, she's full of life
Her mind and heart, an endless strife
Her soul and spirit, a beautiful sight
Her worth beyond measure, just not in sight.

So let us break the chains that bind
And let her be more than just a body in kind
Her worth and value, so much more
Her dignity and respect, what the world should implore.
